TV Tonight publishes an article before #MyFreedomDay, highlighting the purpose of the event and including quotes from Tony Maddox, EVP and Managing Director of CNN International.

CNN rallies student action against human trafficking

February 24th, 2017 By David Knox Filed under: Pay TV, Video, Make a comment

On March 14th CNN will host #MyFreedomDay, a student-led day of action against modern-day slavery.

CNN will organise anti-trafficking events to generate awareness of the multi-billion dollar industry of human trafficking. The CNN Freedom Project will amplify the voices of these young people seeking real social change around the world.

Tony Maddox, EVP and Managing Director of CNN International said: "Children and young people are very often the victims of modern-day slavery, but they are also some of the most energized and engaged activists against it. #MyFreedomDay is designed to provide a focal point for their actions, bring attention to their efforts and link them with others fighting this criminal enterprise in every corner of the globe."

On March 14 CNN's television networks will show the world what students, schools and communities are doing to fight slavery with live coverage of their anti-trafficking rallies. CNN correspondents around the world will also report on these various student-hosted events.

On March 14 CNN's television networks will show the world what students, schools and communities are doing to fight slavery with live coverage of their anti-trafficking rallies. CNN correspondents around the world will also report on these various student-hosted events.

Driving #MyFreedomDay is a simple question: What does freedom mean to you? CNN is asking young people to share their responses via text, photo or video across social media using the #MyFreedomDay hashtag.

That content will be showcased in a dynamic, interactive video wall on CNN.com/myfreedom and across CNN's television and social platforms including Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and Snapchat. CNN will complement those user-generated submissions by publishing a series of stories that highlight real-life examples of how children are approached by human traffickers in addition to recent studies and statistics from support organizations.

#MyFreedomDay : CNN mobilise les étudiants pour une journée mondiale d'action contre l'esclavage moderne

Par Katia Fache | Publié le 14/03/2017 à 09:35

Ce jour, la chaîne CNN s'unit avec les jeunes du monde entier pour une action menée par des étudiants contre l'esclavage moderne, en lançant le hashtag #MyFreedomDay.

L'ensemble des messages fera l'objet d'une vidéo ludique et interactive à visionner sur la chaîne, son site cnn.com/myfreedom, et ses réseaux sociaux. En complément, CNN présentera une série d'histoires qui relatent la vie de ces enfants piégés par l'esclavage moderne, avec des statistiques récentes pour éveiller les consciences et interpeller le plus grand nombre.

Le "CNN Freedom Project" n'est pas tout nouveau, mais existe depuis 2011 (année de son lancement) pour diffuser des reportages d'investigation engagés sur l'esclavage moderne à travers tous les continents. Plusieurs ONG racontent que ces enquêtes ont contribué à l'évolution des lois et des politiques sociales, sans compter les dons aux organisations contre la traite des êtres humains qui se font de plus en plus nombreux. Partagez sur Twitter et Instagram votre définition de la liberté avec #MyFreedomDay.

Le 14 mars, le hashtag #MyFreedomDay mettra en avant - sur Twitter et Instagram - une série d'événements organisés en cette journée spéciale, par les étudiants et les associations qui souhaitent sensibiliser sur la traite d'êtres humains.

Parce que ce sont les jeunes, les plus touchés par cette entreprise, il était évident pour CNN de les mettre à contribution pour s'engager contre cette industrie évaluée à plusieurs milliards de dollars.

CNN lance ainsi le "CNN Freedom Project", qui vise à recueillir des témoignages de victimes de l'esclavage moderne. Toute la journée sur la chaîne, les téléspectateurs suivront en direct les différentes manifestations et des prises de parole. CNN a également souhaité faire parler le monde entier avec le hashtag #MyFreedomDay, en demandant aux internautes qui veulent s'exprimer sur le sujet de poster un message, une photo ou une vidéo sur les réseaux sociaux.

Charlène de Monaco committed to modern slavery

On the Facebook page of its foundation, Charlène de Monaco recalls its commitment to the children for whom it has been mobilized for many years.

"MyFreedom Day 2017", posts the legendary publication of a photograph of the wife of Prince Albert taken during a recent trip to India.

"Last year, Monaco celebrated the 23rd anniversary of its accession to the Convention on the Rights of the Child and in 2015, the Principality ratified the Convention against Trafficking in Human Beings.

In 2012, HSH Princess Charlene launched its Foundation to save lives by fighting drowning. In 2016, she went to India to participate in the "Laureates and Leaders for Children Summit" to talk about the Rights of the Child, "it is also specified.

"As students around the world carry out advocacy against modern slavery on #MyFreedomDay, HSH Princess Charlene reminds us that" young people have the right to be heard and to participate in decisions that affect them. I am proud to live in a country where the rights of children are at the heart of politics, "says the foundation.

Young Post of South China Morning Post summarized Hong Kong schools such as Hong Kong International School, German Swiss International School, West Island School and King George V School participating in CNN's #MyFreedomDay.

Hong Kong students sign up to end slavery as part of CNN's #MyFreedomDay

As part of its Freedom Project to raise awareness of the existence of modern slavery, CNN is teaming up with young people around the world for a student-led day of action on March 14. Several international schools are getting involved and spreading the word.

Hong Kong International School will be broadcasting live events on CNN on Tuesday, including slavery simulations throughout the day, a virtual gallery, and a panel discussion.

German Swiss International School's events incorporate filming a video asking students about the meaning of freedom, and a bake sale to raise funds for Justice Centre, a Hong Kong charity protecting refugees from threats of slavery and torture.

West Island School will hold several events including a "freedom"-themed baking competition and an art exhibit entitled "Break the Chain".

King George V students appeared in a CNN piece during which they experienced simulations of what those in slavery endure. The school will also hold a performance by artist Zino Chan.

It's not too late to get involved. You, your friends, and your school can support the project by spreading #MyFreedomDay on social media. Get creative! Every little helps.

#MyFreedomDay, Fighting Modern-Day Slavery One Hashtag At A Time

By Kaito Au

This year, Ella Hurworth (11), Shayla Sandoval (12), Jazmin Sandoval (11), Julia Bryant (10), Alfonso Perez (10) and Margaret Szweda (11) established HKIS's very own Freedom Project in partnership with CNN. HKIS, along with Seoul Foreign School and Atlanta International School, was one of three schools chosen by CNN to partner with and showcase. HKIS's Freedom Project initiative encourages students to raise awareness of modern-day slavery, through awareness within our school community, while the global CNN Freedom Project aims to spread support among youth through social media.

Freedom Day will take place on Tuesday, March 14 around the world and at the HKIS High School Campus. From 12:00-3:00pm, there will be activities for the HKIS community to watch virtual testimonies, participate in simulations, take quizzes, read books about the issues, and take the pledge against human trafficking, as well as documentary screenings in the library with provided snacks. After school from 5:00-8:00pm, the HKIS Freedom Project will be hosting a panel discussion with three panelists who are experts in human trafficking in Hong Kong in Room 504. The in-school activities, documentary screenings, and the panel discussion after school are open to all students, parents, and faculty.

With estimates of at least 30 million slaves currently living in our world, it is no surprise that initiatives such as CNN's Freedom Project have taken action to fight such an unethical and dehumanizing practice.

Founded in 2011, the CNN Freedom Project is a year-long media project, which aims to "shine a spotlight on the horrors of modern-day slavery and amplify the voices of the victims" through its "unmatched global reach and resources". The CNN Freedom Project compiles testimonies from former victims of slavery or human trafficking on its website, while also showcasing articles and short documentaries to provide readers with information on human trafficking. The Freedom Project has also raised awareness of modern-day slavery by getting influential people to give their own takes on what freedom means to them, via social media with the hashtag #MyFreedomDay.

Hurworth has always felt a moral obligation to address and take action on modern-day slavery. Having grown up in Atlanta, Georgia, the sex trafficking capital of the United States at the time, where approximately 374 girls were sexually exploited monthly with an average age of entry of 12 to 14 years old, she "witnessed the impact that human trafficking has on people."

Even after moving to Hong Kong, Hurworth maintained her dedication to fighting modern slavery. For her Elixir Project in Humanities I in Action, she chose to act against human trafficking. Since she wanted to continue her involvement in fighting this issue after finishing freshman year, she founded the HKIS Freedom Project initiative. In order to form what is now HKIS's Freedom Project, Hurworth reached out to fellow students on Schoology for help with organizing it, and Perez, Shayla Sandoval, Jazmin Sandoval, Szweda and Julia were among the first to respond.

Unlike CNN's Freedom Project, which is led by its staff, individual initiatives like HKIS's Freedom Project are completely student driven. HKIS's Freedom Project consists of five dedicated members who have been "working towards making this project the best that it can be" and whose campus activities have not been completely controlled by CNN.

Perez's reason for joining the Freedom Day initiative is something that hits more close to home. He feels that there needs to be something done about domestic helpers who are currently subject to debt bondage, a form of modern-day slavery, by agencies here in Hong Kong. With loan sharks charging interest rates surpassing the legal limit of Hong Kong with impunity, many domestic helpers find themselves buried neck-deep in debt. When a domestic helper misses a payment deadline, loan sharks begin to use scaring tactics such as directly calling and threatening employers or splashing red paint on the doors of the borrowers. "As a Filipino myself, I connect to that," he says. Both Hurworth and Perez have greater visions for the CNN Freedom Project and its global influence. "Perhaps [The Freedom Project] is something that expands," Hurworth notes. Since only high schools are participating in Freedom Day at the moment, she believes that colleges should take part in the event as well. Perez would also like to see the student-led Freedom Day "grow more internationally so more people are aware."

Teresita outlines the conditions of the orphanage, and explains that children were not allowed to speak to volunteers who attended the orphanage believing they were helping their wellbeing.

CNN speaks to Michelle Oliel, who had helped raise thousands of dollars for the orphanage. Having now founded the Stahili Foundation, Oliel and Teresita now both speak out on the potential dangers of so-called 'voluntourism' and helping families locate family members or guardians.

كم من بريء مظلوم بين سندان الحياة ومطرقة البشر، قضايا وقصص مأسوية لا يمكن حقلأ بشرياً سوتياً يدرك وجودها. ككّ هائل من الألم والمعاناة لأناس كان القدر لهم بالمرصاد، ليجدوا أنفسهم عالقين في با غريبة، سائرين في طرق محفوفة بالمخاطر، وأخرى فاسدة تسودها تجارة #المخدرات والدعارة، والرقية والعبودية، وعسالة الأطفال. ملفات شائكة تتطوي تحت عنوان "الاتجار بالبشر" الذي يتصدر عناوين المرحه الحالية في ظل الصراعات والحروب التي تشهدها منطقة الشرق الأوسط. والتقت "النهار" الإعلامية في شه "سي أن أن" الدولية هالة غوراني للحديث أكثر عن ملف #الاتجار بالبشر الذي تحمل رايته "سي أن أن" ضد مشروع Freedom project، تزامناً مع مؤتمر لـ "هيومن رايتس ووتش" في بيروت لتقديم التقارير > قضايا حقوق الإنسان.

تواضع وبساطة ورفق صفات تختصر حوراني. ولدت في سبائل الأميركية لأبوين سوريين من مدينة حلب. حازت بكالوريوس العلوم في الاقتصاد من جامعة جورج ماسون، وتخرجت من معهد الدراسات السياسية في باريس عام 1995. بدأت مسيرتها المهنية عام 1998 في تلفزيون بلومبرغ في لندن، ثم صحيفة "la Voix du Nord" الفرنسية و"وكالة الأنباء الفرنسية"، وعطفت أثناء عملها الانتخابات المصرية عام 2012، وأزمة اللاجئين السوريين في لبنان في عام 2014، وأحداث الربيع العربي.

تلقت حوراني إلى أن "أزمة اللاجئين دفعت "سي أن أن" إلى إطلاق Freedom project من خلال تسليط الضوء على الاتجار بالبشر بأوجهه كلها، كالاتجار بالجنس، وإساءة معاملة المهاجرين المحلين، وعصابة الأطفال في كل أجزاء العالم وليس منطقة الشرق الأوسط فحسب، بل أيضاً في الدول الغربية ككندا أو الولايات المتحدة، ودول أميركا اللاتينية، وأوروبا الغربية والشرقية، ودول شرق آسيا".

ننتقل إلى ملف اللاجئين، هذه الأزمة المستمرة منذ سنوات، كيف تصفين تعامل الدول العربية معها؟ وفق حوراني "لهذه المسألة جانبان، الأول يكمن في سخاء الناس العاديين، فلبنان استضاف نحو 1.2 مليون لاجيء وربما أكثر (وهذه أرقام رسمية)، وكل من الأردن وتركيا يستضيفان أكثر من مليون لاجيء. وهنا نتحدث عن اللاجئين السوريين فقط بغض النظر عن اللاجئين من بلدان أخرى. يجب أن نعرف بأن الأرقام لا تصدق، وهذا العدد يمثل ربع سكان الدولة السورية قبل الحرب. تخيلي لو حدثت هذه المسألة في أوروبا، في بلد مثل فرنسا، هل يمكنه استضافة 20 مليون لاجيء من البلدان المجاورة؟ هم يجادلون، فيما عدد اللاجئين لديهم لم يتخط العشرة آلاف. وهو رقم لن يكون له تأثير عام على البلاد. أما الجانب الثاني، فيكمن في أن هذا الصراع استغرق فترة طويلة جداً في ظل وجود معاناة اقتصادية. سمعت من لبنانيين عاديين يقولون: الأمر بات مرهقاً ويتقل الاقتصاد. وأنفهم ذلك. حتى إن السوريين، الذين كانوا في البداية متفائلين وشغوفين بالتغيير، يقولون الآن إنهم يائسون جداً. بعضهم يعبر قائلًا: "لا أهتم بعد الآن، إذا عدت إلى ما كنت عليه، أريد فقط أن أكون قادراً على عيش حياتي كالسابق". لذلك، الأزمة بحاجة إلى حل على الرغم من أنني لا أراه قريباً".

لم برأيك لم تفتح الدول العربية الغنية أبوابها للاجئين السوريين، بل اقتصرت أفعالها على المساعدات المادية؟ تجيب: "من الواضح أن التمويل أفضل من لا شيء، لكن المسألة ليست مجرد أموال، بل ترتبط أيضاً بكيفية إدارة الإنسان، وتأمين المأوى، والذهاب إلى المدرسة. أغنى البلدان في المنطقة لم تستقبل اللاجئين، قد يقولون إنهم قدموا تسهيلات مرتبطة بالتأشيرة، لكن لم على ألمانيا مثلاً فتح أبوابها أكثر من هذه البلدان؟ أسئلة مشروعة ولا أعتقد أن الإجابات عليها ترضي الجميع".

كيف يخدم هذا المشروع لبنان ودول الشرق الأوسط؟ تجيب: "بعيداً من هذا المشروع نسلط الضوء في أخبارنا وبرامجنا على القضايا المتعلقة باللاجئين، كما يعمل مراسلنا في لبنان على مواضيع مرتبطة بهذا الشأن وأخرى متعلقة بفقدان الحماية ووضع العائلات في المنازل، وغيرها من الملفات الموجودة في لبنان. ونجد فرقاً شاسعاً بين معرفة القصص الجارية والسماع عنها ممن عاشوها. لا يدرك كثر أن بعض المأسي يمكن أن تحدث في المنزل المجاور لنا أو في الشارع الخاص بنا، لكن عندما يشاهد الناس ملفات كهذه عبر شاشات التلفزة يتأثرون بها أكثر".

أزمة اللاجئين تتكاثف كاهل لبنان، فهل يكون الحل في إنشاء مناطق آمنة؟ برأي غوراني "لا يمكن الحديث عن مناطق آمنة ليرجع إليها المواطنون السوريون في ظل غياب الضمانات منها عدم تعرضهم للصف، أو للهجوم من المتمردين أو المتطرفين أو داعش، المناطق الآمنة تاريخياً لم يُعمل بها، فمن سيحكم هذه المناطق من الجو؟ وتتطلب منطقة حظر للطيران، ثانياً هل يمكن جمع الناس في منطقة آمنة لا توجد فيها بنى تحتية، ووظائف، ومدارس، ومستشفيات؟ هذا مخيم آخر للاجئين في البلاد! كما أن جمع الأفراد سيجعلهم عرضة لهجمات جماعية. وهي في واقع الأمر ليست حلاً، خصوصاً في بلد مثل سوريا حيث الجزء الكبير من الأراضي تحكمه أساساً جهات الميليشيات التي تسيطر على المناطق، ولا توجد سلطة مركزية في المناطق الأخرى خصوصاً في الشمال السوري. فكرة المنطقة الآمنة تحتاج إلى حل الصراع أولاً. أمل أن أكون مخطئة ولكنني أرى صعوبة في المضي قديماً، سيستمر العنف لفترة من الوقت، ولا أرى أي بديل للحكومة. وبالت أحلام الانتخابات والديموقراطية بعيدة الآن. أفضل ما يُمكن أن نأمل في هذه المرحلة وقف النزيف. بعض الناشطين الأكثر عاطفية في عام 2011 يقولون علناً "توقعاتنا أقل بكثير، كل ما نريده هو الاستقرار، لا نلحم حقاً بعد الآن بهذه الديموقراطية النابضة بالحياة".

لم برأيك لم تفتح الدول العربية الغنية أبوابها للاجئين السوريين، بل اقتصرت أفعالها على المساعدات المادية؟ تجيب: "من الواضح أن التمويل أفضل من لا شيء، لكن المسألة ليست مجرد أموال، بل ترتبط أيضاً بكيفية إدارة الإنسان، وتأمين المأوى، والذهاب إلى المدرسة. أعني البلدان في المنطقة لم تستقبل اللاجئين، قد يقولون إنهم قدموا تسهيلات مرتبطة بالتأشيرة، لكن لم على ألمانيا مثلاً فتح أبوابها أكثر من هذه البلدان؟ أسئلة مشروعة ولا أعتقد أن الإجابات عليها ترضي الجميع".

بات الإعلام يسلط الضوء على مسألة اللاجئين السوريين متناسياً الفلسطينيين والعراقيين، لم برأيك؟ تلتف غوراني إلى أن "الفلسطينيين هجروا منذ عقود، وأصبح هناك 3 أجيال من الأطفال ينحدرون من أصل فلسطيني، يجدون أنفسهم في وضع صعب لا يمكنهم الحصول على العمل، وفاقنون للخدمات في البلدان المقيمين فيها. نأمل ألا يكون الحال مشابهاً بالنسبة إلى سوريا، لأن استقرار الوضع سيدفع بالسوريين إلى اختيار العودة، لكنها مفعمة بالمخاطر إذ هناك الكثير من المدن المنسمة والمتضررة، لا يمكنهم العيش تحت سيطرة الجماعات المسلحة في مناطق غير آمنة لأطفالهم، فيما يرفض آخرون العيش تحت مظلة النظام الذي يعتبرونه المسؤول في المقام الأول عن تدمير منازلهم وأحيائهم. أما الفلسطينيون فالخيار أصعب بالنسبة إليهم. فعلاً إن النسيج الأصلي للمنطقة محزن".

مخاضٌ أليم مرّت ولا زالت تمرُّ به منطقة الشرق الأوسط كآله كُتب على أبنائها من جيل إلى آخر حيث صراعات ونزاعات دموية، قُتلت المئات منهم وشكّت الآلاف وشرذمتهم في أصقاع الأرض.

MENA

Exclusive: Hala Gorani, the Syrian conflict and its toll are 'heartbreaking'

BEIRUT: During 2011, Italy was the shipping point for many cases of human trafficking and modern-day slaves from Africa, where they would be used mostly for forced prostitution.

However, after numerous reports of these illegal actions, awareness was raised about this phenomenon, to the extent where a Memorandum of Understanding was signed between the Italian Education Ministry and The CNN Freedom Project's Executive Editor Leif Coorlim to incorporate CNN content into the Italian education system in 2016.

CNN Freedom Project materials will be made available through the network of educational institutions across Italy.

"The whole point behind the freedom project is that it raises awareness of human rights abuses and human trafficking issues which might be going on in the house next door or along your street that you might not necessarily be aware of," Hala Gorani, Anchor of CNN's The World Right Now, told Annahar, in an exclusive interview during her visit to Beirut to attend a Human Rights Watch Event.

Under the agreement with Italy– facilitated by CNN International Commercial and CNN Freedom Project supporter The Essam & Dalal Obaid Foundation (EDOF) – video material from CNN Freedom Project will be used to increase awareness about human trafficking and modern-day slavery among Italian students. The project – spanning reports, documentaries, and digital content – will be used in classrooms to promote practical solutions to improving the care of people affected by such issues. Italian students will also be encouraged to join and contribute to the CNN Freedom Project's efforts.

Gorani highlighted that CNN's choice to focus on this particular aspect of human rights – human trafficking – is due to its long-standing presence in the world, rather than something related specifically to the current news cycle, adding that "sometimes it does relate to the refugee crisis, but often times it's about sex trafficking, domestic migrant abuse etc.. and existing in all parts of the world, be it in the Middle East, Asia or wherever."

Gorani highlighted that CNN's choice to focus on this particular aspect of human rights – human trafficking – is due to its long-standing presence in the world, rather than something related specifically to the current news cycle, adding that "sometimes it does relate to the refugee crisis, but often times it's about sex trafficking, domestic migrant abuse etc.. and existing in all parts of the world, be it in the Middle East, Asia or wherever."

The CNN anchor noted that this initiative prompts government action through the efforts of investigative reporting which potentially leads to government toward changing laws or addressing certain situations. "There have been many cases where reporting has kind of pressured governments into changing laws or placing new ones to address a certain situation in order to act upon these phenomena," Gorani said.

In Lebanon and the Middle East's human rights spectrum, she explained, that even outside the project's focus the network has frequently reported on refugee cases across the region and within Lebanese territories especially about laws protecting domestic workers from human rights abuses.

When asked about the underlining cause of the problem, Gorani notes that the main cause for its existence is money, since the only way to dim human trafficking is by making it a less profitable business to people. "Policing, awareness and making it less appealing to people are actually managing the symptoms but the problem fundamentally is that it's still a profitable business, so that's where you have to address things," she added.

The anchor stressed that the problem not only exists in the third world or countries in conflict, but is an equal opportunity blight within countries in every corner of the world, noting that the Freedom Project has worked in many parts of the world such as the United States, United Kingdom and elsewhere where human rights are codified into law and well defined.

Places where viewers would not expect to find prevalent human trafficking.

"If you look at many cases, a lot of them exist in Europe, especially of sex workers in eastern European countries that traffic women who were promised jobs in waitressing or hostessing and they end being used for forced prostitution, thus western countries are not immune," she added.

Aside from the Freedom Project, Gorani expressed a frustration among the masses with the ongoing regional conflicts, such as Syria - now in its sixth year -, because of the human and economic costs that have been incurred.

"When I speak to Lebanese people they say they just want a solution, even Syrians who in the beginning were very hopeful and passionate about change, are now so desperate that they say they don't care anymore if they go back to the way it was. Time is essential now, you need to find a solution quickly otherwise it will become a problem that's bigger than it is now, and I don't see a solution quickly," she said.

Gorani stressed the tremendous generosity given by ordinary people in countries taking in the unbelievable number refugees, when "looking at the in Lebanon which are 1.2 million possibly more, those are the official numbers, you look at Jordan, hundreds of thousands, Turkey over a million and we're just talking Syrian refugees not refugees from other countries," she said, adding ", imagine if in Europe a country like France had 20 million refugees from a neighboring country, I mean they are arguing about 10 thousand which would have no overall impact on the country whatsoever."

In terms of GCC countries' role in the refugee crisis, Gorani highlights the legitimate question asked by the world of why the richest countries of the region are taking in no official refugees, while European countries such as Germany are accommodating a huge number of refugees.

"Gulf countries such Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, UAE and others counter this claim by offering to fund hosting countries such as Lebanon and Jordan, while giving Syrians family visas, that they didn't give before, but that doesn't really replace large-scale refugee management because these are small numbers," she said, stressing that both answers don't satisfy everybody and is far from it, "I think maybe when history will look back on this issue there will be these questions hanging over these [Gulf] countries as to why didn't they do more?"

L'année dernière, Monaco a célébré le 23^{ème} anniversaire de son adhésion à la Convention sur les Droits de l'Enfant et en 2015, la Principauté a ratifié la Convention sur la lutte contre la Traite des Êtres Humains.

En 2012, S.A.S. la Princesse Charlene a lancé Sa Fondation pour sauver des vies en luttant contre la noyade. En 2016, Elle s'est rendue en Inde pour participer au « Laureates and Leaders for Children Summit » afin de parler des Droits de l'Enfant.

Last year, Monaco celebrated the 23rd anniversary of the Principality's accession to the Convention on the Rights of the Child and, in 2015, Monaco ratified the Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings.

In 2012, Her Serene Highness Princess Charlene established the Princess Charlene of Monaco Foundation to save lives by putting an end to drowning. In 2016, the Princess travelled to India for the Laureates and Leaders for Children Summit to speak up for child rights.

As students around the world raise awareness of modern slavery on #MyFreedomDay, HSH Princess Charlene reminds us that "young people have a right to be heard and to participate in decisions that affect them. I am proud to live in a country where child rights are at the top of the policy agenda."

CNN mobilizes students for global day of action against human trafficking

CNN is teaming up with young people around the globe for a unique, student-led day of action against modern-day slavery with the launch of #MyFreedomDay, it was announced by Tony Maddox, EVP and managing director of CNN International.

As part of the #MyFreedomDay call to action, students will organize anti-trafficking events on March 14 to generate awareness of the multi-billion dollar industry of human trafficking. CNN and the CNN Freedom Project, the network's award-winning initiative focused on covering stories of modern-day slavery, will amplify the voices of these young people seeking real social change around the world.

Maddox said, "Children and young people are very often the victims of modern-day slavery, but they are also some of the most energized and engaged activists against it. #MyFreedomDay is designed to provide a focal point for their actions, bring attention to their efforts and link them with others fighting this criminal enterprise in every corner of the globe."

On March 14 CNN's television networks will show the world what students, schools and communities are doing to fight slavery with live coverage of their anti-trafficking rallies. CNN correspondents around the world will also report on these various student-hosted events.

Driving #MyFreedomDay is a simple question: What does freedom mean to you? CNN is asking young people to share their responses via text, photo or video across social media using the #MyFreedomDay hashtag.

That content will be showcased in a dynamic, interactive video wall on CNN.com/myfreedom and across CNN's television and social platforms including Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and Snapchat. CNN will complement those user-generated submissions by publishing a series of stories that highlight real-life examples of how children are approached by human traffickers in addition to recent studies and statistics from support organizations.

UWCSEA SPREADS HUMAN TRAFFICKING AWARENESS

Students at United World College South East Asia East Campus (UWCSEA) led an initiative against modern-day slavery in support of the CNN Freedom Project on March 14.

They wanted to generate awareness on human trafficking problems, such as those of Thai sex trafficking rings and young girls being sold as child brides.

Various activities were carried out on the day. These included a survey with peers to find out their level of awareness on human trafficking, the screening of a video the students shot in multiple languages on how to recognise a trafficker, and role-playing by drama students playing traffickers and victims.

Apart from participating in these activities, UWCSEA students also gathered at an assembly to discuss modern-day slavery.

It took five weeks for the Year 10 UWCSEA East students to put together the event.

UWCSEA was one of more than a hundred schools around the world which supported the CNN Freedom Project, which engaged thousands of students. More than a dozen of those schools were from Asia.

Students at Seoul Foreign School (SFS) took part in a live international CNN broadcast, "My Freedom Day," a global event raising awareness of modern slavery last Tuesday.

Initially contacted by CNN International, the school chose four human rights international baccalaureate (IB) diploma, extended essay students and three IB diploma CAS (creativity, activity, service) projects to be involved.

Originating in Atlanta several years ago "My Freedom Project" is a CNN worldwide event which hopes to bring attention to the problem of modern-day slavery. This year 100 schools around the world held events to bring attention to the issue.

The SFS was one of nine schools worldwide to take part in the live event.

"This sort of project is at the heart of what our school is, and has always been about — helping great students engage with important global issues. As educators we are always hoping that our students will go out into the world and make a difference and it's wonderful to see our students doing that while they're still within our walls," said Head of School Colm Flanagan.

"As a leading regional international school it is one of our privileges to empower our students and provide them with the opportunity to speak out on their passion for world change," he added.

Justyna McMillan, IB CORE coordinator said, "This is a small start to something that we hope to continue on a yearly basis. We are going to make sure that My Freedom Day is an event we will continue to participate in to raise awareness."

"We believe that the people who are going to make a difference to modern-day slavery today are the young people, they have the power to stop this. They have the ability to bring otherwise taboo topics to the forefront."

Founded in 1912, SFS is the oldest international school in Korea and the seventh oldest international school in the world. SFS is the first authorized IB diploma school in Korea, and offers an international pre-K-12 learning environment to a student community comprising over 50 nationalities.

International school of Geneva hosted a student panel where young people could express themselves about freedom, and how they can contribute to creating a world without human trafficking – or modern-day slavery. The event was livestreamed by CNN.

My Freedom Day

My Freedom Day

14 Mar 18:00 - 21:00

Ecole Internationale de Genève — International School of Geneva, 62 Route de Chêne

Le 14 mars prochain, les élèves et jeunes leaders de l'organisation Youth Underground, avec le soutien et la collaboration de The CNN Freedom Project (<http://edition.cnn.com/specials/world/freedom-project>) viendront présenter leurs actions, leurs valeurs et leur rôle dans l'une des causes humanitaires les plus graves : La traite des êtres humains.

Ouverture des portes à 17h30

Billets : T-Shirt à 20CHF = billet d'entrée

Lieu : Centre des arts - Auditorium

Youth Underground, que font-t-ils ?

Leur but est de présenter des initiatives contre la traite des êtres humains à travers la sensibilisation et le plaidoyer.

Leur approche est de mettre en avant « l'écho » et la voix de la jeunesse afin de souligner l'immensité qu'est le commerce de la traite des êtres humains.

Par cela, ils ont deux processus de fonctionnement :

1. Représenter une plateforme d'échange d'informations et d'aiguillage mondial, un centre de connaissances de la jeunesse afin de présenter des initiatives contre la traite des êtres humains par les jeunes, en tant que promoteurs du changement et défenseurs des droits de l'homme.
2. Représenter également un point de rencontre pour les entreprises privées et les associations impliquées dans la création d'un monde meilleur ; un monde sans traite.

On estime à près de 21 millions (l'équivalent de la population de la Roumanie) les personnes soumises à une forme d'esclavage aujourd'hui. Parmi elles, on compte des domestiques sous-payés et claustrés, des travailleurs sans salaires dont des enfants, des filles, des garçons et des femmes, soumis au commerce sexuel, des prisonniers contraints à travailler pour rembourser des dettes, des jeunes filles victimes de mariages forcés. Les organisations qui profitent de ces trafics d'êtres humains en retirent un profit de 150 milliards de dollars par an.

1. Les restaveks

En Haïti, des enfants sont utilisés comme domestiques par certaines familles. On les appelle les «restaveks», du français «rester avec». Ces garçons et ces filles sont envoyés par leurs familles dans d'autres, plus aisées, pour qu'ils bénéficient de meilleurs soins et d'une meilleure éducation. Cependant, beaucoup reçoivent de mauvais traitements et sont victimes de violence au lieu d'être bien traités.

2. Esclaves sexuelles américaines envoyées en Allemagne et au Japon

On estime à 4,5 millions de femmes et d'enfants, le nombre de personnes exploitées par l'industrie du sexe, pour la prostitution d'escort, de salon, de rue et la pornographie. Aux Etats-Unis, la provenance des prostituées est essentiellement localisée au Mexique, aux Philippines, en Thaïlande, au Honduras, au Guatemala, au Salvador et en Inde. Des Américaines sont aussi victimes de ce trafic humain et se retrouvent en Allemagne, au Pays-Bas et au Japon, essentiellement.

3. La Corée du Nord et ses travailleurs forcés

L'Organisation internationale du travail, basée à Genève, estime que 21 millions de personnes subissent une forme

d'esclavage. Des Etats exploitent directement des travailleurs dont ils tirent d'énormes bénéfices. C'est notamment le cas de la Corée du Nord, qui en a fait une véritable économie. Le régime dictatorial en place fait travailler ses citoyens retenus dans des camps, mais il envoie aussi à l'étranger des hommes et des femmes qui ne perçoivent qu'une toute petite partie de leur salaire, tandis que l'Etat récupère l'essentiel de ces sommes.

4. La dette éternelle de réfugiés

Dans plusieurs pays de la planète, des immigrés sont mis au travail pour payer leur dette. Les employeurs font en sorte que des frais de logement et autres grossissent cette dette, constituées au départ par le prix du voyage ou de (faux) papiers, afin qu'elle ne soit jamais réellement remboursée. Au besoin, ces employeurs retiennent les papiers des travailleurs, ou les font disparaître pour retenir les personnes en leur pouvoir.

5. CNN s'engage

La chaîne d'information continue américaine CNN a lancé une grande campagne pour informer et faire cesser toutes les formes d'esclavage aux Etats-Unis, dont l'histoire en la matière est longue et douloureuse. Sur son site internet, elle publie de nombreux témoignages de victimes ou d'associations qui luttent contre ce fléau. La chaîne incite notamment les jeunes à organiser dans leur établissement scolaire des événements le 14 mars. L'opération s'intitule MyFreedomDay.

6. La planète des esclaves

Les pays les plus touchés sont, selon le rapport annuel du Département d'Etat américain, en Afrique: la Mauritanie, l'Algérie, les deux Soudan, la République centrafricaine, les deux Guinées, le Zimbabwe, la Gambie et l'Erythrée. En Asie: la Corée du Nord, la Birmanie, la Papouasie-Nouvelle Guinée, le Turkmenistan et l'Ouzbekistan. En Europe: la Russie et la Biélorussie. Au Proche-Orient: la Syrie et l'Iran. En Amérique : Haïti, Belize, le Surinam et le Venezuela.

美國CNN自由計畫於今年3月14日推動「My Freedom Day」，號召世界各地學生，透過參與學校和社區活動為人權受迫者發聲，提高世人對人口販運的認識，聖心女中英語資優班學生昨也透過拍影片、寫信來表達對人權的關懷。

英資班高一學生林彥妤說，為響應「我的自由日」活動，高一、二英資班同學拍了「自由對我自己而言是什麼？」影片，並戴上打著叉叉的口罩，體驗那些無法自由發聲的人們處境。

Students from Hockerill Anglo-European college and Bishop's Stortford school in Hertfordshire helped to highlight the issue of modern-day slavery. With Hockerill hosting the news team before Bishop's Stortford junior and upper years of the school taking part in the student activity day. Year nine Geography lessons were dedicated to discussions and video making exploring themes of what a slave was, whilst sixth formers modelled a United Nations debate to discuss abolishing slavery that was aired live via CNN. The entire college took part in a limited lunch option of pasta and rice and vegetable bowls, to highlight the limited food options available to slaves. The basic lunch enabled the college to save £800, which was donated to 'The Fairtrade Charity'. The students' day culminated in a fundraising colour run, where runners were showered with coloured powder, to celebrate Hindu spring festival Holi. Around £400 was raised for HEAL, a charity which provides shelter, support, education and healthcare to children in India.

News cameras were at a Bishop's Stortford school as students helped to highlight the issue of modern slavery.

Hockerill Anglo-European College hosted a news team from broadcaster CNN as part of its initiative #MyFreedomDay yesterday (Tuesday, March 14).

After taking part in a range of activities, the students' day culminated in a fundraising colour run, where runners are showered with coloured powder, to celebrate Hindu spring festival Holi.

Around £400 was raised for HEAL, a charity which provides shelter, support, education and healthcare to children in India.

Young people played a key role in proceedings, reflecting that millions of children are victims of human trafficking and modern day slavery.

A spokeswoman for the school said: "We were delighted to be chosen as one of the featured schools to receive a visit from a CNN correspondent reporting live .

"#MyFreedomDay provided a great opportunity to discuss with all of our students across all year groups the issue of modern day slavery globally."

The day began with principal Richard Markham being interviewed live by CNN's Eleni Giokos to talk about what freedom means to the Bishop's Stortford-based college.

Theory of knowledge students spent a lesson discussing why we are more able to acknowledge slavery in history than confront the reality of it still existing today, while in social anthropology the students discussed issues surrounding migrant workers in our food system.

Year nine students spent their geography lesson discussing what a slave is and making their own videos, while design technology students filled an "ideas wall" with their thoughts on the subject.

The whole college shared a basic lunch of either pasta or a vegetable rice bowl with very few trimmings, which both saved about £800 to be donated to a Fairtrade charity, and helped the students think about the limited food options available to slave workers.

In the afternoon, the sixth form model United Nations group debated a resolution to abolish slavery worldwide, which was one of the live broadcasts of the day.

Vice principal Dineke Spackman said: "Our aim had been to raise awareness about modern slavery and, today, we most definitely achieved that.

"During the day I felt an intense pride in our students and the way they conducted themselves. This will be a day that they remember for years to come."

Yes, Slavery is Still a Problem Today—
Here's How to Get Involved

By TAYLOR BAKER | 14.03.17 6:00 PM

We tend to think of slavery as a thing of the past—something an engagement that we can hardly understand how our ancestors let it happen. But slavery persists today, in many forms—from sex trafficking rings in South Dakota to child labor in gold mines in the Philippines to families in India working to pay off debts from a generation ago. According to the most reliable estimates, between 20 million and 45 million people are under of eight now. The problem is so widespread—and so tied up in the supply chain that gives us goods we use on a daily basis—that we're all complicit.

Today, March 14, CNN is leading a day of action to raise awareness about the multi-billion dollar human trafficking industry. They're asking people around the globe to answer one question: What does freedom mean to you? Then, share the answer on social media with #MyFreedomDay to raise awareness about this critical issue.

Young people are getting particularly involved, holding anti-trafficking events and allies around the world. Kit McCarthy is a high school senior living in Atlanta and a member of her school's anti-trafficking club, which is holding a panel discussion about human trafficking. She first learned about the issue when she was a sophomore and was immediately drawn into activism. Since then, she says she's learned that trafficking can be a tricky thing to talk about.

"It's not something that people always want to talk about, because it's so delicate," she said. "I try to explain to people the wide-scale impact it has on our lives. Human trafficking touches everything we do—our phones, the food we eat, the clothes we wear, and the point isn't to make people feel bad, but to help them relate to the problem."

If you want to learn more about human trafficking, there's a ton of great information on the issue over at CNN. And don't forget to check out the #MyFreedomDay hashtag on social media throughout the day.

"Children and young people are very often the victims of modern-day slavery, but they are also some of the most energized and engaged activists against it," Maddox said in a news release. "#MyFreedomDay is designed to provide a focal point for their actions, bring attention to their efforts and link them with others fighting this criminal enterprise in every corner of the globe."

CNN and the CNN Freedom Project, an initiative launched in 2011 that focuses on human trafficking, will "amplify the voices of these young people seeking real social change around the world," the release said. CNN will air live coverage of the anti-trafficking events.

Celebrities including Woody Harrelson, Usain Bolt and Quincy Jones have recorded videos discussing what freedom means to them for the occasion.

More than 100 schools around the world have committed to participating by holding events, a CNN spokeswoman said. Some of the schools are in the metro Atlanta area. The following events are open to the public.

- A rally with speakers, interactive art and food will take place at the Kessler Campanile, an 80-foot tower on the Georgia Tech campus, from 11:05 to 11:50 a.m. The 45-minute length of the event is to "represent the 45 million victims of slavery in the world today," according to the Stand for Freedom Rally Facebook page.
- The Atlanta International School will hold a human trafficking panel event with speakers including a human trafficking survivor, the head of the FBI squad responsible for investigating human trafficking and an attorney at the Georgia Asylum and Immigration Network. It runs from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

- East Point City Councilwoman Stephanie Gordon has partnered with Tri-Cities High School to hold a garden planting dedicated to trafficking victims across the globe at 9 a.m. The city will later host a panel discussion at 6:30 p.m. at Jefferson Park Recreation Center, 1431 Norman Berry Drive.

What Freedom Day means in Haiti

What Does Freedom Day Mean In Haiti?

03/14/2017 08:57 am ET | Updated Mar 15, 2017

On the 5th of February, the Haitian police broke up a trafficking ring at Kaliko Beach – a stunning Caribbean resort that is a hotspot for national and international tourists. Thirty-one girls and young women (the youngest was 13) were rescued, and nine traffickers were arrested. The victims told the police they had been drugged, sexually assaulted and filmed with pornography.

Those of us working in Haiti rejoiced at the police operation. Haiti ranks 8th in the world for Modern Slavery. (See Orphanage Entrepreneurs: Orphanage Entrepreneurs: The Trafficking of Haiti's Invisible Children.)

Trafficking takes place openly. Children are bought and sold, or stolen from their families – to be exploited sexually or for their labor – often in many of the country's orphanages, simply to raise money from well-intended foreign donors. Perpetrators are rarely arrested, and there are few state services to protect and support the victims.

But just a year ago, the Haitian President set up an Anti-Trafficking Committee, made up of civil servants from many government ministries working together with human rights activists. The Committee has no budget or resources allocated by the government, and all the members have other day jobs. But they have worked steadily over the past year to raise awareness of the problem of trafficking and to try to ensure the arrest and prosecution of traffickers and the protection of the victims.

This, the 5th of February, was a day to celebrate – not only because 31 extremely vulnerable girls were rescued. But also, this seemed to be a sign that Haiti – the country where, more than 200 years ago, slaves rebelled, freed themselves and overthrew French colonial rule – was beginning to take on the terrible problem of modern slavery.

Then last week, for reasons no one can as yet explain, the Kaliko Beach traffickers were released. It was a devastating blow to all of us who care about protecting children. I can only imagine how difficult it must be for the police who worked so hard on this operation and the Anti-Trafficking Committee who are trying to enforce the law and fight a massive tide of crime and corruption.

The victims must be terrified to know the traffickers are one the loose again. What can be done to right this wrong? Firstly, the newly installed government should take on this case as a top priority. The Ministry of Justice should quickly investigate why and how the traffickers were released and arrange for their re-arrest. Secondly, the newly elected President of Haiti, Jovenel Moise, should prioritize the fight against trafficking and allocate enough resources and people to this cause. Thirdly, the international community should condemn the release of the traffickers and ask the Haitian government to investigate what happened and correct this mistake.

Today is My Freedom Day #myfreedomday, when CNN raises awareness about the fight against slavery globally. And tomorrow, March 15th, in New York, the UN Security Council will open debate on Modern Slavery. The debate, with the United Kingdom presiding, is to focus on ending forced labor, human trafficking and organized crime.

When children can be bought and sold, as if on the open market, when no one is truly safe from traffickers, a country like Haiti cannot develop. We call on everyone participating in My Freedom Day across the world to condemn this travesty and demand the Haitian government and international community act to ensure this can never happen again.

Between 21 million and 45 million people worldwide are trapped in slavery, and at least 5.5 million of those are children, according to CNN's Freedom Project.

Although slavery is outlawed in every country, criminals earn more than $150 billion every year from enslaving people. For more information on modern slavery, contact Tony Talbott, UD human rights lecturer and Abolition Ohio director, at 937-229-4326.
